Interested in helping build resilience in your community to targeted violence and domestic terrorism? In this hands-on workshop, you'll be equipped to work to enhance civic engagement by encouraging community involvement, education and resilience against radicalization to violence. You'll learn how to explain community risk factors, lead discussions on building resilience through mitigating risk factors and building protective factors and discover and learn to implement techniques found to help reduce support for political violence. This workshop will be of benefit to law enforcement officials, concerned community members and social workers among others. For more details contact Dr. Laurie Rice at larice@siue.edu or Dr. Suranjan Weeraratne at sweerar@siue.edu.

Advance registration required. To register, scan the QR code or visit SIUE Online Services and Educational Outreach's registration page.

The training is funded by the U.S Department of Homeland Security's Center for Prevention Programs and Partnerships, opportunity number DHS-22-TTP-132-00-01
