Re: Requests for future training support

Mr. Page,

I would first like to express our gratitude for the invitation to visit your offices and future training facilities. You have a very professional operation and with the future adaptation of the training facilities we toured, training opportunities will be well placed and easily supported by the multiple room layouts and surrounding grounds.

The Center for Domestic Preparedness (CDP) has become a premier training program offering emergency response training in the area of weapons of mass destruction, defensive and offensive operations. In addition, the CDP works to provide an array of all-risk, all-hazard programming in both resident and non-residence training courses. As part of our non-resident deliveries, we feel your future training facilities would be conducive to many of our courses currently listed in our course catalog.

Consistent with the practices of the CDP for initiating our mobile training deliveries, it is our intent to entertain your requests for future training support. Upon your written request through the State of Illinois, State Administrative Agency Representative Gene Felchner, the CDP will review course availability for delivery.

Again, thank you for your inquiry into the CDP and we look forward to the possibility of providing courses to your emergency response audiences.

Respectfully,
